

We're all in this together (even if we're far apart).

View the online version.

Dear Elizabeth,

For many of us here at TeacherLists and PTO Today, this new school-at-home routine has been an adventure every day so far. We're attempting to be good teachers for our kids while also taking care of other family members, doing chores, figuring out how to work from home at the same time—and wondering just how long we'll need to keep this all up.

As a fellow parent, we thought you might be feeling the same way. So this is just a quick email to share some links you might find helpful:

A roundup of at-home enrichment activities and more that you can take advantage of while schools are closed

14 popular Internet slang terms and acronyms that every parent should know (if you're anything like us, your kids are spending a lot more time online these days...)

Step-by-step instructions for two engaging science activities: DIY bouncy ball and elephant toothpaste

We have more updates in the works—like school-at-home supply lists for early elementary through middle school grades, and ideas to let your kids' teachers know how much you appreciate them. Let us know if you'd like to be notified when we post new content.

Stay healthy, give your kids extra hugs, and be kind to yourself.

-The TeacherLists Team

This email was sent to emiller@sanjuan.edu by PTO Today and TeacherLists
100 Stonewall Boulevard | Wrentham | MA | 02093
Forward To A Friend | Manage Your Email Preferences