Vans or Converse

Shoes. Shoes are important. For walking, for fashion, or just to keep your feet clean. Whether you like it or not, shoes are a necessity. However, some people disagree which shoes are superior. Recently, people have worn either Vans or Converse, so we asked a few people what they thought was better. When we surveyed the people 75% like Vans and 25% prefer Converse. Almost everyone in the Newspaper Club preferred Vans. What do you prefer, Vans is coming out with better soles, but Converse have been a brand for a way longer time than Vans.

The first Vans were made on March 16, 1966 in Anaheim, California by brothers Paul Van Doren and Jim Van Doren. It was originally called the Van Doren Rubber Company. On the first day they got 12 customers who would order in the morning and pick up later that day. Vans used to be used mostly by skateboarders. It got its motto VANS' "OFF THE WALL" in 1976. By the end of the 70's Vans had over 70 stores and sells internationally. Vans soon gained attention internationally and got featured in movies.

Converse were first made by Marquis M. Converse in February 1908. He was 47. The store they make Converse specializes in making Galoshes. Galoshes are rubber based shoes. The first real Converse shoe was a brown high-top with a black sole. However, Converse became popular when Chuck Taylor began wearing them.

This was a major break-through for the Converse company. Chuck Taylor gave them inspiration for their name in 1921. In 1936, the white high-top with red and blue stripes that was made for Chuck Taylor in the Olympics became the most popular design for the Converse company. It is still a design today.
